Avalon Public spreads joy through singing

Avalon Public has become one of the first schools to participate in an intergenerational music program supporting locals with dementia. The school's choir is a part of Your Side Australia's Dementia Friendly Intergenerational Music Program and has performed at Avalon House aged care facility.

The students have participated in a series of workshops that have certified them as Dementia Friends, providing them with the skills to connect with older generations that may feel isolated in care.

"It brightens your day," Avalon House resident Jeanette Cohen says of the school choir's visits.

"I am very happy when the children come in and everyone else is too. Because a lot of us have grown-up children and grandchildren, you are not really that in touch with young people like you were when you were young.

"There's nothing more wonderful than a choir."

Further sessions of the program will be held in April this year, with local high schools also encouraged to partake.
